A deer boy falls in love with a magical attack helicopter, much to the chagrin of her murderous father. Bear witness to our "boy", Leon Hartley, uses psychological manipulation to connive his way into social circles, beat up people, and refuse to believe he's a bad person. Watch as our helicopter, Juliana, learns that being a person is a terrible thing, and that being an inanimate object makes it much easier to deal with those pesky emotions and an over controlling fiance-dad. Read this nearly high-school level of romantic-modern-fantasy schlock that plays with strange ideas, such as meta-narrative, ideals falling to the wayside, and narrators that may or may not know you're reading a book.

But I digress, since you're probably not going to find the barely hidden meanings scattered through this... document.

Oh yeah, there's a Deer God and a Golden Tower.
